Understanding Your Child’s Special Education Rights

Who is eligible for special education services?

- Any child between the ages of 3 and 22 is eligible for special education services if he has a qualifying disability.
  - The federal laws that provide special education and related services for students are the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act (Section 504). The differences between a special education plan under each of these laws are discussed on page 2 of this pamphlet.
- Under IDEA, qualifying disabilities include only the following conditions - specific learning disabilities, other health impairments, autism, emotional disturbance, speech or language impairment, visual impairment, deafness, hearing impairment, deaf-blindness, orthopedic impairment, intellectual disability, traumatic brain injury, or multiple of the above disabilities.
- Under Section 504, a child qualifies if he has a “physical or mental impairment” that “substantially limits one or more major life activities” (such as walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, writing, reading, math calculations, caring for oneself, manual tasks, etc.).
- All children with disabilities have the right to a “free and appropriate public education” in the “least restrictive environment.”

What can I do for my child?

- Make a written request that the school do an evaluation of your child for special education services.
- Provide written consent for the school to evaluate your child for special education services.
- Communicate with your child’s teachers, intervention specialists, and school administrators to ensure that your child’s needs are being met.
- If your child is on a special education plan and is still struggling, request that the school reevaluate the plan.
- Know that you have the right to disagree with the school’s opinion of what is best for your child.
- Know that you have the right to an attorney at meetings regarding your child’s special education needs.
What types of special education plans are there and what rights do they provide?

Can my child be suspended or expelled if he is on a special education plan?

- A child on an IEP or 504 Plan may be disciplined the same as any other student, until the school wants to out-of-school suspend or expel the child for more than 10 school days in an academic year.

- If the school wants to remove a child for more than 10 days, the school must hold a Manifestation Determination Review meeting.
  - If the behavior causing the removal is a manifestation of the child’s disability, the school may not remove him.

- The school is required to provide notice of the removal and a hearing for the child to dispute the removal. The school is required to inform the parent of the right to have an attorney at the hearing.

When should I contact LASC?

- You want help writing letters to your child’s teachers and school administrators to request needed special education evaluations for your child.

- You disagree with the school’s decision regarding your child’s eligibility for special education or related services, or you disagree with the services they are providing your child.

- You want an advocate for you and your child at the school if educators are not helping you to identify and address your child’s learning needs, or if the school is not implementing your child’s IEP or 504 Plan.

- Your child has been given an out-of-school suspension or expulsion and you believe the behavior causing the removal was due to your child’s disability.
